Dear Doctor:-

We have been much impressed with a most interesting and valuable article by you which appeared in a recent issue of the Medical Record, and are taking the liberty of writing to you to solicit a contribution from you on any medical topic for early publication in American Medicine.

As you may know American Medicine is one of the most widely read and quoted medical journals in America and assures you an audience that is not exceeded by that of any other high class medical monthly.

We are constantly striving to make American Medicine helpful and inspiring to the thinking medical men of the country and it is because we believe any article you may send us will aid us in these efforts that we are asking you to become a regular contributor to our pages.

Hoping you have something in hand you can send us in the near future, and assuring you that we will "leave no stone unturned" to make our relations most pleasant and satisfactory, we remain,

Faithfully yours,

The Editors of American Medicine
